

13 April – Blundells Copse – Phillip Allen

Today's task was installing steps to replace those removed by CROW. On arriving on site Mark decided to go and arm twist a friend who lived nearby, so we had six people. We were working on creating steps using the non-rotten pieces of elm from the old steps for the risers, and levelling out the bank. It was slow going digging out the various lumps of concrete that had been attached to the old posts for the hand rails. Despite not leaving site until 7.15 when it was too dark to see the cow slips at the top of the steps the hand rails did not have enough supports to prevent the local vandals removing and damaging the hand rails by the Tuesday afternoon.
